And how does your garden

Powerpacked Authority. Terrifically Effective.

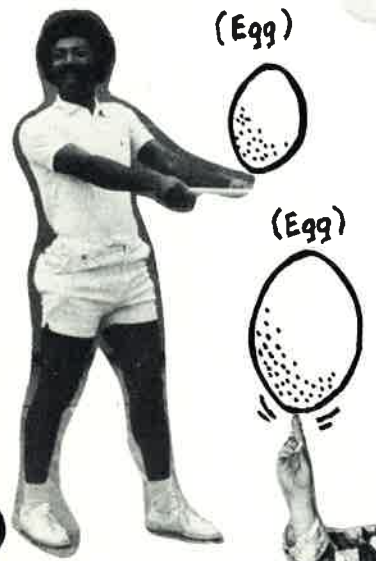

Marci Gutting Team Eight

There is a poem singing in my head. I shall catch it so I may sing the happy tune to you, and you will know how much I care. After all, there is a song for every special person in this world and we're all special, aren't we?

Rachel Mann Team Eight

In my hand I hold a fragile, cold orb Shining, radiant white innocence For all to see, and in its depths A growing substance of life; A slowly forming mass Taking shape in my hand, carefully cupped As a mold for it to fit. It is a deliciousness that can be shared. I must not leave sight of it — All will be lost if it goes. Ah, I see you have one, too! You have an egg, you say? Well, I call it love . . .

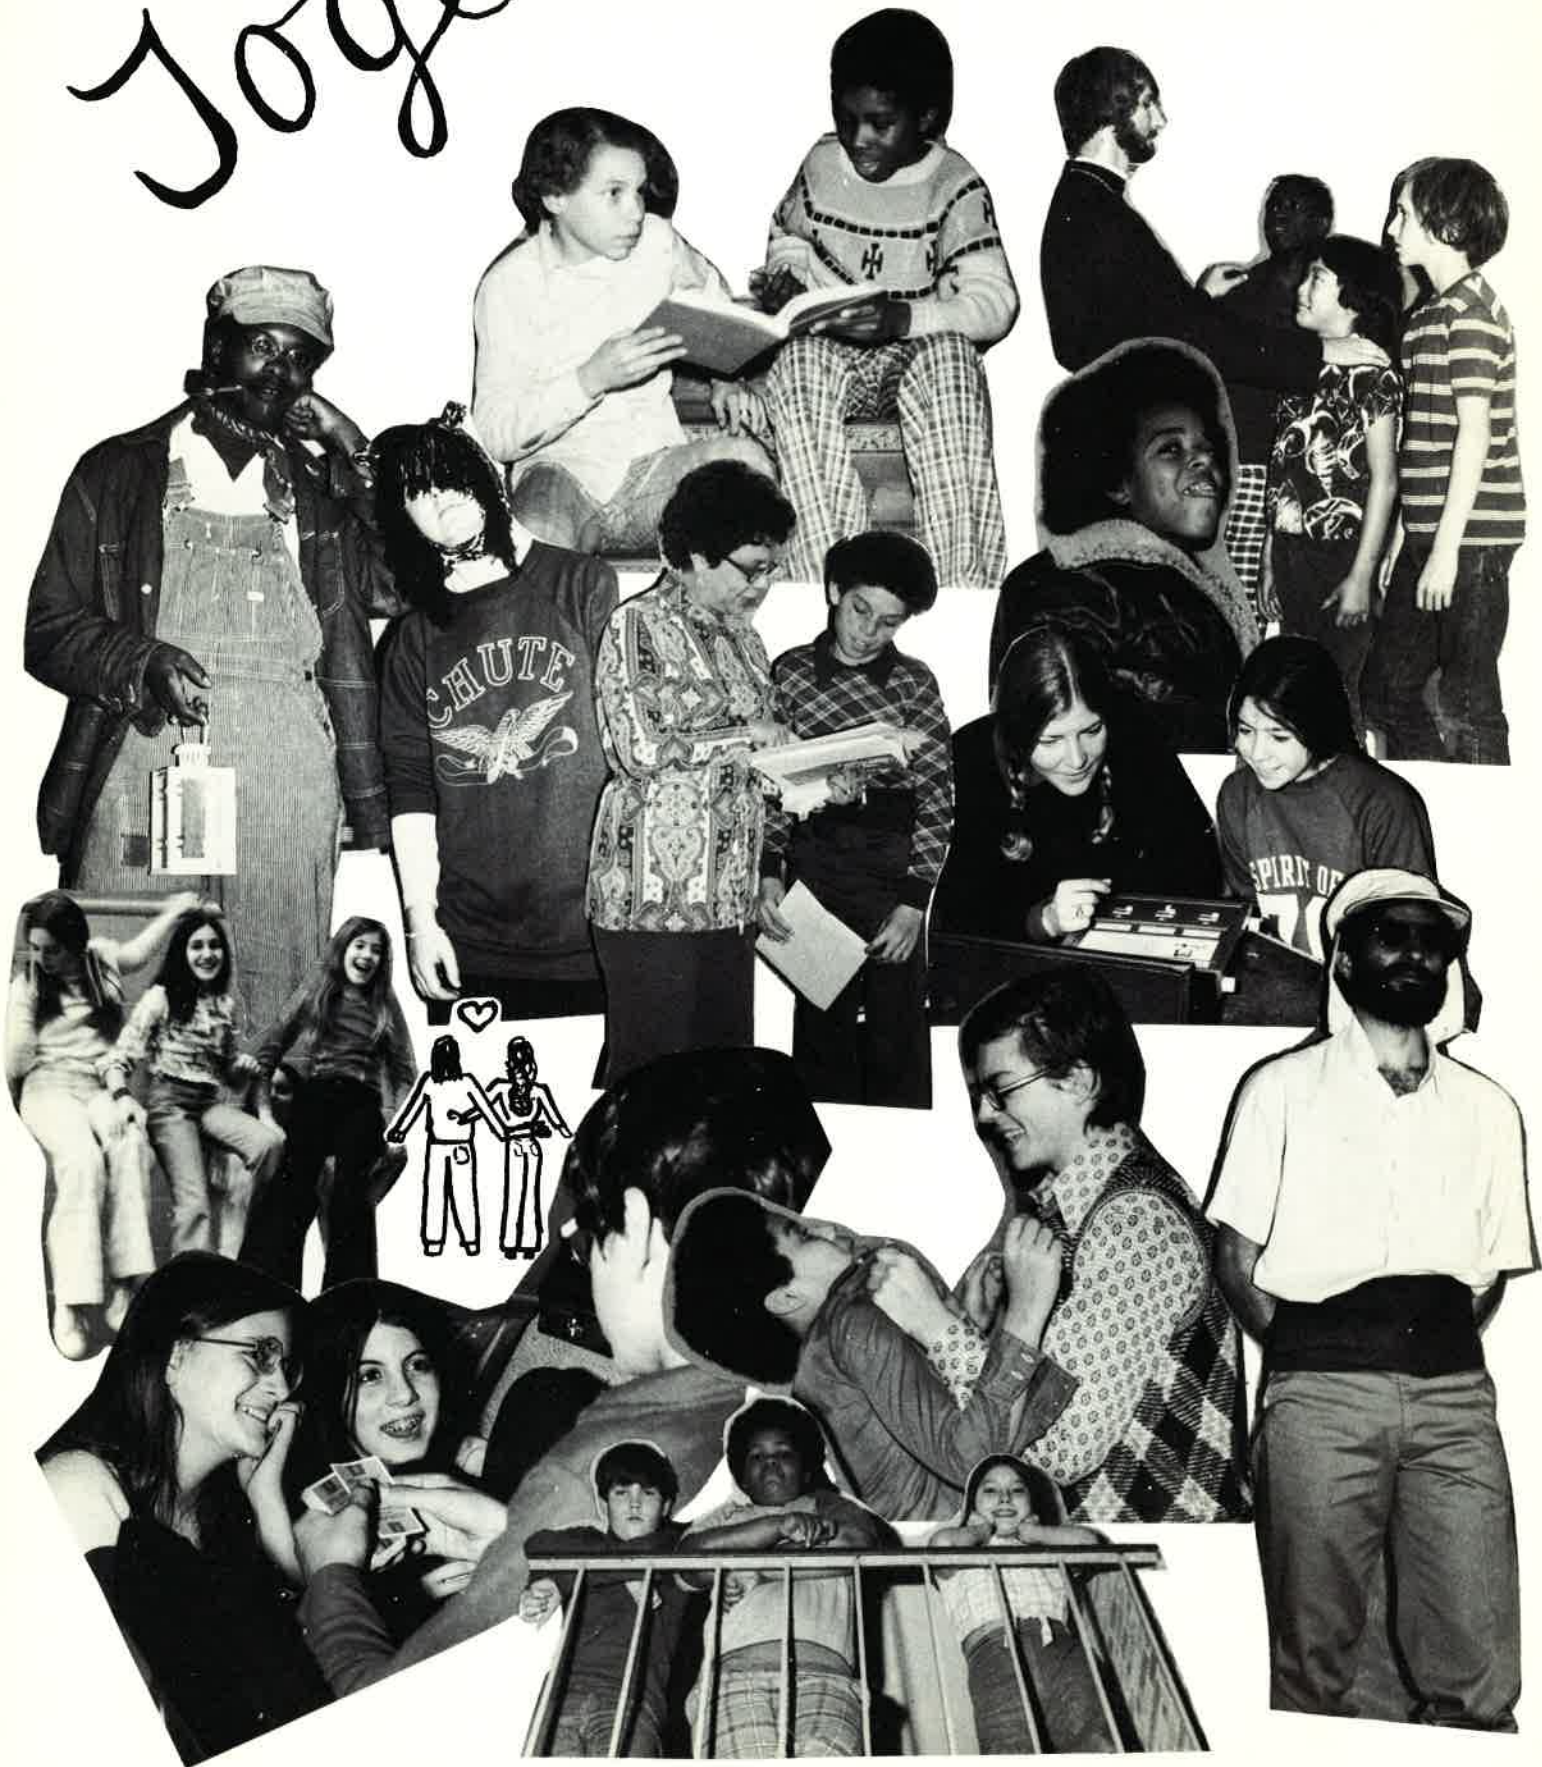

Wendy Zuckerman Team Eight

Friends will Really stick by you In time of need — in Every situation. No matter if you're UP or DOWN.

Shari Paul Team Eight

Together we can make it...

Friendship is:
 Sharing.
 Helping someone feel better when they hurt inside.
 Wishing someone was your brother or sister.
 Being sad when someone leaves.
 Trusting.
 Telling your true feelings.
 Being considerate.
 Taking someone along.
 Having faith and confidence in what they want to do.
 Keeping an important secret.
 Having fun together.
 Standing up for and taking the blame for someone.
 Not bossing each other around.
 Teaching someone something.
 Introducing people.
 Liking someone.
 Being able to be yourselves with each other.
 Being sensitive to each other's moods.
 Giving and taking.

The World Is Going to Pot

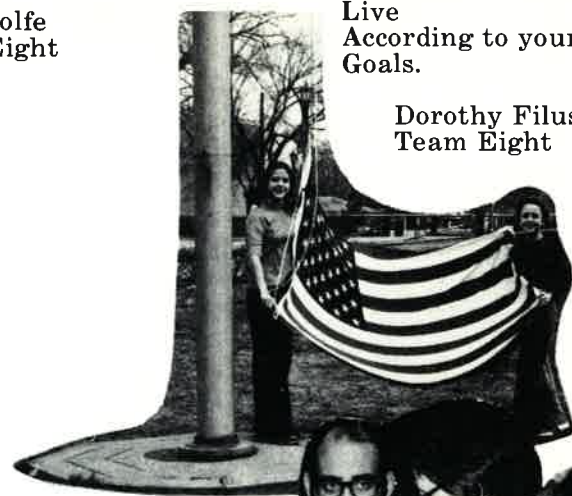

The world is going to pot I say!
Just read the paper I read today.
It's all about crime and violence and war,
I don't even walk on the streets any more.
The world is going to pot I say —
My girl-friend just moved away.

Busy

You probe
So deep.
You go down
Into the axis
Of political problems,
Of the natural habitat of
The jaguar,
Of insurance policies,
Of the meaning of a word.
But when it comes
To real problems,
To what's on my mind,
To impractical impulses,
You haven't got time.

The Inside Me!

I like to run,
I like to play,
I like to eat and drink.
But most of all I like the times when I just sit and think.

I creep off to a special place
That's only known to me,
And think of all the things I am
And all I want to be.

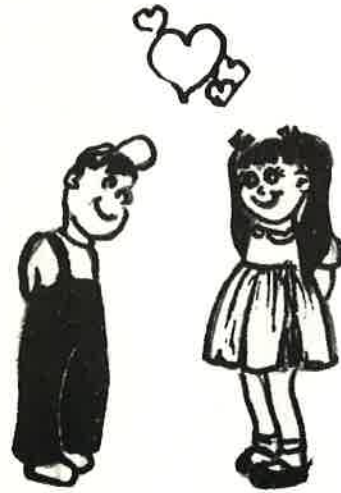

It's fun to laugh,
It's fun to drink,
Run quiet, wild and free.
But best of all, I like the times
I spend with the inside me.

A Tribute to Garbage Men

Running through streets and alleys at night,
 Collecting the garbage with all their might.
 Their gloves smell like the garlic we had last night.

Perils of the Latrine

Sitting on a cold, cold seat
 Munching on a sugar beet;
 Staring at my smelly feet,
 Wishing they would smell more sweet.

Going down a hill in a pool,
I felt like a fool.
I struck a tree;
it struck me.
We spun around;
we were flung to the ground;
we were all hurt.
I felt like a jerk,
but we went back up the hill, and we were going down fine, until we hit a large bump.
I felt my heart jump.
I said, in midair, "Oh, crud!"
Then we landed, thud!
I felt like an idiot.
I couldn't believe we did it.
But!
Do you know what?
I told my friend,
we'd go down again!

The old black mutt, with a scraggly tail,
 He roams the streets, his voice a wail,
 His coat is mangy, his ribs show through,
 His life is empty, he has nothing to do.
 His stomach shows hunger, his eyes show more,
 He walks around and begs at your door.
 When days are cold, and nights are freezing,
 You'll hear him coughing, crying and wheezing.
 He never stays, he hits the trail,
 The last you'll see is his scraggly tail.

The Storm of '67

In the storm of '67
 the snowplow blew snow all over.
 It was a hassle
 trying to fight the heavy wind.
 I wiped out
 and fell face down
 in a puddle of water.
 We spun down Mt. Trashmore
 in a plastic pool,
 hit some trees;
 later got a shovelful of slush
 dumped on our heads,
 got splattered by a laundry truck,
 bombed by a squirrel.
 We packed our snowballs tight,
 bombed anything in sight,
 even a policeman.

That year my mother made me bundle up till I felt like a mummy
 in my longjohns, my itchy scarf, the sweaters under my coat.
 But I had a big hole in my boot and that's why
 I hate that winter most.

The Great Depression

Everything was going fine
 Before the time of 1929
 When the stock market crashed to a record low
 And unemployment sure did grow.
 A cry of a child who hasn't been fed
 He cries for some milk instead of stale bread.
 You see an old man who cries everyday,
 A middle-aged man who died one night,
 He died for restaurant scraps in a fight.
 The veterans who came from miles around
 Wanted rightful pay, but were turned down.
 The drought which killed so many cattle —
 The farmers knew it was a losing battle.
 Then the war created many jobs
 Which ended the unemployment mobs.

Jelly
 On bread is Yummy.

An Autumn Storm

Throughout the night, sleet pecked at my bedroom window.
 Rhythmic tapping on my sweating pane,
 like Apaches on the warpath.
 Each beat was harder than the last, as if something was approaching.
 Trees swayed from the great North Wind.
 There was a flash of light from the gloomy skies, brighter than day.
 Thunder crashed like a bomb exploding.

IMPRESSIONS

Hockey.
 Puck, stick.
 Skate, quick.
 Shoot score.
 Game's o're!

Suddenly all is quiet.
 The something that came slowly diminishes into the darkness.
 The clouds disappear, leaving a bright moon.
 All is still
